"A Human Slave" at the Park.

It looks as if J. M. Ward, the manager of popular-priced theatrical attractions, has struck a genuine winner in his new melodrama, "A Human Slave," which opened a half week's engagement at the Park yesterday. Not only was the theater crowded to the walls at both the afternoon and even performances, but such enthusiastic audiences have not assembled in the Park in many a day-and that is saying a good deal. "A Human Slave," which was written by William L. Roberts, received its initial presentation at the Alhambra Theater. Chicago, just a week ago last night, and its present engagement is its second of the season. The scenery is new and unusually massive for a popular-priced play. The players have not as yet had time to become weary of their parts and they enact them with vigor and earnestness that is really quite refreshing, and the stage management is far above the average. As for the play itself it is a melodrama of the old English school, although its scenes are laid in this country, and while it is constructed slong the conventional lines of plays of its class, the climaxes are unusually strong and all of the scenes and incidents are put on the stage in an attractive manner. The story of the play is based on a certain struggle between capital and labor that takes place in a large city. The foreman of the iron works falls in love with the daughter of the ironmaster, and the girl returns his affection. There you have the hero and the heroine. The ironmaster doesn't want his daughter to marry a poor workingman, and, in the excitement of denouncing such a suicidal alliance, is over-and falls dead. There you have the respectable old man of the story, who is always dying off or being killed at the end of the first act. The junior partner of the on works desires to marry the beautiful girl himself, and upon being told by her just where he stands," proceeds to make fe miserable for heroine, hero and everybody else in the play. There you have the villain. With such a good start the dramatist has had clear sailing, and he has dereloped a series of thrilling incidents, intercenes-a strong combination that holds the nterest of the audience until the final hapby denoument at the end of the play There is a stage setting representing the interior of the iron works that is one of the best things of the kind ever seen at the Park. It is in this act that a crowd of striking workmen, angered over the refusal of their villainous employer to meet their demand for better wages, attempt to revenge their wrongs by pinioning the bad man of the play to a machine that, if allowed to have its own way, will grind him to pieces. Here it is that the hero shows what a real hero he is by coming to the rescue of the man who has caused all his W. H. Delman makes a good-looking here and plays his part in admirable style.' J. J. Hyland as the villain, Miss Olive Martin as the heroine, William J. Maddern as a young clerk, James Harrison in the rele of a kindly old doctor and Miss Nellie Dunbar in an ingenue part all acted with intelligence, and, as before remarked, with an exceptional amount of enthusiasm. Most of the comedy of the piece is supplied by James McElhern and Edna Reming, who, in the character of a mill hand and his best girl, keep the audience laughing whenever they are on the stage. Both have singing specialties, and their songs were loudly applauded yesterday at the two performances. Miss Dunbar also contributes a vocal specialty in the course of the play, singing two ballads in a deep contralto voice. 'A Human Slave" will continue at the Park to-day and to-morrow, with the usual matinees, and the new melodrama is sure to continue playing to overflowing audiences. The old emotional play. "East Lynne," comes to the Park Thursday for the latter half of the week.

Theatrical Notes.

The opening headliner at the Grand Opera House this season will be one of the most artistic, expensive acts in vaudeville. Mr. M. C. Anderson during his summer vacation in New York secured for his two houses, the Grand and the Columbia, the operatic singer, Madame Eugenie Mantel-II. The name is familiar to all lovers of grand opera. For five years she was a leading member of the Grau forces, her pure contralto notes being heard in many cities of the country. Manager Anderson secured her for the opening week, Aug. 31 of the Grand. She comes with her own accompanist from Cincinnati. It is the highest priced act of the solo-singing line ever out on at any Western vaudeville house. It marks an epoch in the career of the house. The rest of the opening week's acts are also extremely good and include Falke & Semon, the best eccentric musical act ever seen at the Grand. The local manager, Shafer Ziegler, has returned from. his Eastern trip. He was at Sheepshead Bay, Coney Island and Saratoga, N. Y., most of the summer. Press Agent Louis W. Buckley arrived yesterday from New York. Mr. Buckley was gleatly pleased with the decorations in the interior of the Grand and at once got down to active business at his desk yesterday.

Jessie Milward, who was seen in this city last season as one of the leading players with John Drew, is to star this season. She has spent the summer at her English home and will return to America within the next two weeks to begin rehearsals of "A Clean Slate," the new comedy by R. C. Carton, author of "Lord and Lady Algy." Her supporting company, is to include some disinguished players among them being J. H. Gilmour, Helen Tracy, Verner Clarges and the beautiful Drina de Wolfe. Miss De Wolfe was also with John Drew last season and Miss Millward has taken quite a fancy to the fair young American actress.

What is said to be one of the most attractive stage pictures ever offered by a minstrel show is the transformation scene entitled "While Old Glory Waves," which is presented this season by the Al. G. Field Minstrels. This feature of the entertainment is a mixture of patriotic music and color and is calculated to cause a burst of enthusiasm from all parts of the theater. Manager Field has spent a good deal of money in his efforts to make this spectacular portion of his show a great success. The sale of seats for the minstrel performance of Thursday night opened at | there. English's box office yesterday morning with a good demand.

x x x It is understood in New York theatrical circles that Jean Richpin, the author of the book of Anna Held's new comic opera, 'Mile. Napoleon," is coming to America to direct the rehearsals of his piece and incidentally to prosecute vigorously a lawsuit against David Belasco. The French playwright claims a royalty for Belasco's production of "Du Barry." He wants nothing less than $50,000, declaring that he has a contract signed by Belasco accepting the play written by him (Richpin) and that he even designed the costumes for the pro-

Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin wil begin their joint starring tour to-night in San Francisco under the direction of Charles B. Dillingham. They will play season of five weeks at the Columbia Theater in the Pacific metropolis before going on the road. Their repertoire will include "The Taming of Helen," "The Marott | master." Mr. Miller is a great favorite in San Francisco and appears there every summer for at least a month's run

Julia Marlowe in modern gowns will be an attractive stage figure this season. Her new play, "Fools of Nature," by H. V. Es mond, calls for the appearance of her entire career in the garb of to-day. The nearest Miss Marlowe has ever come to their house party of Aurora friends. modern costumes on the stage was when she played the part of Charlotte Durand in "The Cavalier." In Mr. Esmond's play she appears as an English society woman.

Great claims are being made for the Savage "King Dodo," which will be at English's for two nights, Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 24 and 25. The comedy-opera has been refurnished and improved and carries two score of pretty girls. Seat sales will begin | Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

He said that if they wanted to they could eat their picnic dinner in the station, and he might manage to send them out to the picnic grounds in the afternoon on a freight train. The wagon which had brought them in from the farm had gone back immediately, to return in the evening, so they accepted the station master's offer, with profuse gratitude. When noon drew near went up in town for my dinner, and when I came back the station picnic spread on the benches was under full headway. The kind station master had made a fire in his stove on a hot August day, the big basket was unpacked and the coffee was boiling away.
